To Whomsoever It May Concern

I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Dev Kunal Turakhia, whom I have had the opportunity to know closely since Grade 9 at Bharati Vidyapeeth Rabindranath Tagore School of Excellence.

When Dev joined the school in Grade 9, he was still developing his emotional confidence and adjusting to a new academic and social environment. Over the years, I have witnessed a remarkable transformation in him. Today, Dev stands out as a confident, focused, and determined young individual who approaches his responsibilities with maturity and perseverance.

Dev is deeply passionate about sports, particularly tennis and football. His commitment, discipline, and enthusiasm led him to take on leadership roles, and he went on to become the Sports Captain of the school. In this role, he demonstrated strong leadership skills, responsibility, and the ability to motivate and guide his peers. He has also represented the school in several football tournaments, consistently displaying sportsmanship, teamwork, and resilience.

Beyond sports, Dev has shown commendable personal growth by overcoming his initial fear of public speaking. This growth was most evident when he confidently took the stage as a speaker at a TED-style event, where he spoke on the topic "Great Expectations: Thriving in an Absurd World." His ability to articulate ideas thoughtfully and engage an audience reflected both courage and intellectual maturity.

Dev has also contributed significantly to the success of BVRTSE Model United Nations by serving on the Organising Committee. In this capacity, he demonstrated strong organisational skills, collaboration, and a sense of ownership, working diligently behind the scenes to ensure the smooth execution of the event.

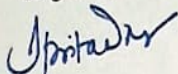

What truly distinguishes Dev is the quality of his relationships within the school community. He shares a strong and respectful bond not only with his peers but also with his teachers and juniors. His approachable nature, willingness to support others, and ability to lead by example have earned him admiration and trust across age groups.

Through his journey at school, Dev has developed a clear understanding of the balance between pursuing his passion for sports and maintaining academic discipline. He manages his time effectively, remains focused on his studies, and consistently upholds his academic responsibilities alongside his extracurricular commitments.
